

uname (get kernel info)

You'll mainly use this command to determine the version of your Linux kernel. Invoke it like this:

```
uname -a
```

The option -a ("all") will have uname display some other useful information, such as your machine's CPU architecture.